

MACS 2027

9th International Symposium on Molecular Aspects of Catalysis by Sulfides (MACS IX)

Visegrád, Hungary | 23–27 May 2027

SPONSORSHIP & EXHIBITION OPPORTUNITIES

Connect your organization with an international community of researchers and industry professionals working at the forefront of sulfide catalysis. Support MACS 2027 and introduce your products, services and expertise to a specialist audience.

WORKING DRAFT — Prices and benefits have been adapted from the previous brochure as a starting point. All terms are provisional and require confirmation by the MACS 2027 organizers before circulation.

Welcome to MACS 2027

The 9th International Symposium on Molecular Aspects of Catalysis by Sulfides (MACS IX) will take place in Visegrád, Hungary, on 23–27 May 2027, organized by the HUN-REN Centre for Energy Research. The symposium continues a series of meetings connecting academia and industry in sulfide catalysis.

Scientific scope

- Hydrotreating and related catalytic processes
- Catalyst preparation and structure–activity relationships
- In situ and operando characterization
- Computational catalysis and mechanistic studies
- Sulfides in electrochemical and photoelectrochemical energy conversion
- Catalytic approaches to CO₂ reduction and emerging energy applications

Why become a sponsor?

- Present products, technologies and services to an international specialist audience.
- Build connections with academic groups, industrial R&D; teams and potential collaborators.
- Increase visibility through conference materials, digital channels and on-site opportunities.
- Support scientific exchange across fundamental catalysis and applied energy research.

Venue

The symposium will be held in Visegrád, in Hungary's Danube Bend region. Venue-specific exhibition arrangements and practical information will be confirmed on the official conference website.
